

Marlise Newman
b. 1951

"I paint from an instinctive feeling rather than conscious reasoning. I seek to draw the viewer in through atmosphere and mystery. I utilize distinctive mark making and color within classic landscape themes and objects ... but with a contemporary voice. My intention is for the viewer to dive in and want to stay...to let the work awaken feelings and memories within..."

A North Carolina native, Marlise obtained a degree in Art and Design at Central Piedmont College in Charlotte, NC and has worked since then as a professional artist and graphic designer. Creative expression has been the defining goal of her lifetime journey.

Newman's fine art pursuits have led her to study with accomplished artists such as Kathleen Elsey and the notable Fauvist painter, Steven Aimone. In addition, Newman is honored to have studied with internationally respected artists Margie Stewart, Maggie Siner and Andrew Braitman.

Newman's award winning paintings have been selected for numerous juried exhibitions, and her work can be found in private and corporate collections throughout the country and abroad.
